Before any contentious action is taken, the Parties shall seek, in good faith, to settle amicably their disputes relating to the validity, interpretation, performance or non-performance, interruption, termination or termination of the Contract. The Parties shall make all necessary findings to enable them to find a solution to the conflict between them.

17.3. If no amicable resolution is reached, and unless otherwise provided, any dispute concerning the validity, interpretation or execution of one of Our Contracts shall be brought before Luxembourg's competent courts having jurisdiction where Gandi is headquartered.

Article 2 - Description of the service

The Reseller participates in the distribution channel for domain name registrations and provides to its clients, natural or legal persons (herein after the "End Customers") the services of a registrar, including the collection of registration data on the registrants registered names and their presentation to the Registrars, or the contribution to the registration of the registration agreement between the Registrar and the holder of the registered domain name, in accordance with the mandatory rules by these entities and accreditation agreements binding the registrars to these entities.

Article 3 - Reseller's commitment

Subject to strict compliance with the conditions and technical limitations specific to each Extensions, the Reseller agrees to:

- allow its End Customers to make their requests regarding the registration and management of their domain name, subject to its availability, so as to allow their automated transmissions to the relevant Registry via the services of a Registrar;
- allow its End Customers to check the availability of a domain name before registering and to be aware of the specific rules and conditions applicable to the extension they wish to select, before engaging them by registering their domain name;
- to transmit the registration data to the relevant Registries via the services of a Registrar within the required timeframes so that they are taken into account in the globally shared database of Internet domain names;
- provide a Whois service that allows anyone to access, free of charge, the most recent registration data (ie, at least daily updated) for any active, registered domain name and managed by Gandi;
- to quickly update its database used to provide public access to the Whois database upon receipt of domain name data updates, to make available and to update the directory at least every 5 hours Whois domain names;
- to inform its End Customers about the rules and conditions applicable to the extensions proposed by the Registrar as part of its naming services.

Article 4 - Specific Obligations of the End Customer under Our Naming Services

The End Customer agrees to choose and ensure the use of Gandi's Services in a lawful manner, and to identify itself to Gandi, and to respect and enforce the specifications and technical limitations of Gandi's Services.

4.1. Obligation to identify the Contact Owner and Domain Contacts

The identification of the End Customer is essential to the provision of the domain name registration service, since the service is intended in particular to identify the Domain Contacts of any domain name on the Internet, by integrating their identity and coordinates in the "Whois" Directory of domain names.

In addition to the obligation to identify oneself, the End Customer undertakes to provide the information required by the Normative Framework of Naming, which may vary according to the extensions of the domain names.

The necessary or optional information is indicated, at the time of collection, on the Gandi Website, in order to take into account the specific rules for the selected extension. They are mainly the following:

- for the owner of the domain name: (1) if the End Customer is a natural person, its name and first name; if the End Customer is a legal entity, its corporate name, its identification number (ie: SIREN or INSEE) and the name of the natural person authorized to represent it; (2) complete mailing address; (3) email address; (4) telephone number; (5) where applicable, fax number and / or cell phone number;
- for each Domain Contact: (1) if the Contact is a natural person, its name and surname; if the Contact is a corporation, its legal name and the name of its representative; (2) complete mailing address; (3) e-mail address; (4) telephone number; (5) where applicable, fax number and / or cell phone number;
- for the domain name, the technical information: (1) primary and secondary DNS IP addresses (name servers); (2) corresponding DNS names. DNS information is provided by Gandi if the End Customer has selected some of Gandi's optional technical services.

In connection with the provision of the domain name registration service, the End Customer acknowledges and agrees that the Reseller is required to collect such data for disclosure to the Registrar who will communicate it to the Supervisory Authorities and Registries and make it publicly available on the "Whois" directory of domain names.

This information, associated with the Domain Contacts that the End Customer has filled in for its domain name, is declared under its sole responsibility.

4.2. Obligation to update identification data

4.2.1. The End Customer undertakes, both for itself and for its Domain Contacts, including in case of use license, to provide complete, accurate and reliable information, to update regularly, spontaneously or on request, all data associated with the registration of its domain name, so that they are complete and reliable and can be used to provide useful information and to provide any proof upon first request (in particular to justify its identity and/or contact information, the identity and/or contact information of its Contacts Domain, the respect of any rule specific to the extension of its domain name).

As the declared Contact Owner, the End Customer remains responsible for the provision and updating of its Contact Owner's data as well as that of its Domain Contacts, including in the case of a license granted to a third party.

As indicated below, the breach of this obligation will be likely to motivate the suspension or even the destruction of the Account of the End Customer and/or associated Services, and in accordance with the mandatory rules governing the Internet naming system, the suspension or even the cancellation of the registration of its domain name.

4.2.2. In addition, pursuant to ICANN's rules, for domain names with ICANN-managed extension, the End Customer agrees, both for itself and for its Domain Contacts, to update his contact data spontaneously within 7 days of any change in its information or in its Domain Contacts's information.

Failure to update its personal data within 7 days of any change or failure to respond to a request for verification of its personal data within 15 days may result in the suspension or destruction of its domain names.

In addition, pursuant to the Registrar's rules and accreditation agreement with ICANN, the Registrar is obligated to verify the reachability of the End Customer and the person who has paid for the domain name. Thus, the Registrar will send to the email address associated with the End Customer's Account indicated as the Contact Owner as well as to the email address of the person who made the payment as indicated in its Account, an email containing a link to validate to justify the validity of these email addresses. The email sent by the Registrar must be validated within 15 days, otherwise the domain name(s) registered in an ICANN-managed extension will be suspended until validation of its email address and that of the person who made the payment. This verification is done once per email address, either when registering a domain name, an incoming transfer to the Registrar or a change of ownership and when changing the email address of the End Customer or the person who made the payment, if the email address has not been previously verified according to this procedure.

The Registrar also has the obligation to carry out a re-verification of the email address of the End Customer or of the person who made the payment, if the Registrar is in possession of information indicating that these email addresses would no longer be valid.

Article 5 - Duration

The End Customer chooses the duration for which it wishes to register or renew its domain name (from one to ten years indivisible) according to the constraints applicable to each type of request and to each Extension.

Any domain name thus has an expiration date which is mentioned in the Whois (<https://www.gandi.net/whois>) (hereinafter referred to as the "Expiration").

The domain name and any optional accessory services of the domain name valid at the Reseller will terminate automatically and automatically on that Expiration date, unless specifically stated otherwise in the Special Terms and Conditions related to some Extensions.

This domain name, which has reverted to the public domain, will then be available again for registration under the "first come, first served" rule.

In order not to lose its rights on the domain name (and if necessary to avoid a break in service with regard to the optional services subscribed), the End Customer may, if it wishes, request renewal before Expiration, for the duration that it chooses, according to the conditions and within the time required by the Normative Framework of Naming which will then be in force.

Article 6 - Termination of the Agreement

The End Customer may early terminate the Agreement, by assigning its domain name to a third party or by requesting the transfer of its domain name to another Registrar under the terms and conditions specified in Article 8.

Article 7 - Terms of use

7.1. Domain Contacts of the End Customer

If the End Customer delegates the management of its domain name and/or all or part of the Domain Contacts functions, and if the End Customer grants a license to use its domain name to a third party, the End Customer shall guarantee the respect of the Normative Framework of Naming by its agents and by all beneficiaries of license of use which must moreover be informed and have accepted that:

- the identity and contact details of the Domain Contacts, which are the responsibility of the End Customer to maintain at all times, are accurate, reliable and up-to-date;
- the sole quality of Domain Contact or payer of a domain name does not grant ownership of said domain name. Only the Contact Owner, mentioned as such in Gandi's database can claim ownership of the domain name;
- if the Registrar is obliged to do so, it reserves the right to act against the declared Domain Contacts or the person who made the payment on behalf of the End Customer.

If the End Customer has delegated the management of its domain name to one or more other persons, they may act as agents on its behalf and under its responsibility both on its domain name and on any optional service incidental to its domain name, according to the rights that the End Customer has granted them.

7.2. Choice and use of the domain name

- the End Customer undertakes to choose its domain name in accordance with all applicable laws and regulations or administrative provisions, and the rights of third parties (in particular intellectual property rights, personality rights, right to the image and privacy rights);
- the End Customer declares that, to the best of its knowledge, neither the registration of its domain name nor the manner in which it is directly or indirectly used violates the rights of third parties or the applicable laws and regulations;
- the End Customer declares and warrants to have, throughout the Contract, all rights, authorizations, licenses, or any other element necessary for the choice of its domain name and the use of associated services, so to be able to justify, if necessary, upon first request ;
- the End Customer agrees not to engage, directly or indirectly, in unlawful, fraudulent, deviant, abusive, or harmful activities and/or practices of any kind, including in connection with optional ancillary services it may subscribe.

In addition, in accordance with ICANN's rules, for domain names with ICANN-managed extension, the End Customer is liable for any use of its domain name, including any license granted to a third party, except to disclose the identity and contact information of that third party to the complainant within 7 days.

Article 8 - Description of main services

Article 8.1. Domain Name Registration

8.1.1. Domain Name creation

Subject to unavailable, prohibited or reserved domain names, as listed by the Supervisory Authorities and the Registries, whose registration will not be possible, the Registrar shall not exercise any prior control over the choice of the domain name of the End Customer. The End Customer makes its choice under its full and entire liability and shall ensure by its own means the lawfulness of a domain name and/or its rights to register and/or use it prior to its registration request. The acceptance of a domain name registration does not presume in any way its lawfulness and/or the End Customer's rights to register and/or to use it.

Once the registration is done, the End Customer will not be able to change the name of the domain. In case of error, the End Customer may proceed to a new registration of the domain name corresponding exactly to its wish, and also if it wishes, request the early destruction of the domain name that it would have registered by mistake, without being entitled to any compensation or reimbursement in this respect.

The globally applied rule for the registration of domain names is "first come, first served" unless otherwise provided by the Registry (ie priority phase for trademark owners or auctioning). Requests are therefore processed in chronological order. The request from the End Customer is automatically transmitted by the Registrar to the relevant Registry according to the chosen extension.

It is here specified that a domain name, available at the time of the End Customer's request, may no longer be available at the time of receipt of payment (in particular in the case of payment by check) or, where applicable, upon receipt of the required supporting documents. In this case, the Registrar refunds this unsuccessful order, unless otherwise imposed by the Supervisory Authorities and the Registries. The Registrar cannot be held liable thereby, except to demonstrate the fault of its intervention.

8.1.2. Domain name changes and management

As the owner of a domain name (designated as such in the Whois public databases), the End Customer can directly and independently access, modify, update and/or correct most of the data related to its domain name without intervention of the Registrar.

The changes are automatically transferred to the Registrar's databases, transmitted to the relevant Registry by the Registrar and thus made public in the Whois directory, without manual reprocessing on its part and under the full and complete responsibility of the End Customer.

However, when the changes require a specific intervention by the Registrar and/or the production of supporting documents, the End Customer shall provide the required documents, according to the terms communicated by the Registrar.

8.2 Domain Name transfer to a Registrar (Inbound or Outbound Transfer)

The effectiveness of a transfer is subject to a formalism composed of several stages, requiring the intervention of several actors and may be restricted according to the extensions concerned such as:

- the refusal of the current Registrar to transfer the domain name to the new Registrar for legitimate reasons (for example, in case of unpaid, fraud, litigation, or other specific reasons);
- the opening of judicial or extrajudicial proceedings;
- for certain extensions, the respect of a minimum period of sixty (60) days following the initial registration of the domain name or following the last transfer.

Therefore, the Registrar's responsibility cannot be engaged if the transfer fails for a reason that is not attributable to it (for example refusal or absence of authorization of one of the actors: Registry, Registrar, domain owner, Domain Contacts ; the domain status technically preventing the transfer : expiration date exceeded, domain name locked against transfers, etc.).

It is here specified that the special conditions applicable to each extension may require a change of the validity period of the domain name during an inbound transfer, which the End Customer must be aware of prior to any transfer.

8.3. Renewal and restoration of a domain name

The Registrar agrees to notify the Contact Owner and/or Administrative Contacts at least thirty (30) calendar days prior to the Expiration of the domain name, by email only.

In addition, pursuant to ICANN's rules, for domain names with an ICANN-managed extension, the Registrar will notify the Contact Owner at least one (1) month before Expiration, one (1) week prior to Expiration and one (1) day after Expiration of the domain name by email sent to the email address of the Contact owner registered in the Registrar's database.

In case of failure to pay the renewal within the time limit before the Expiration, the domain name will be destroyed at the Expiration date.

However, provided that the applicable Normative Framework of Naming allows it and according to the conditions specific to each domain name extension:

- the destruction may be preceded by a period of "freezing" of the domain name during which it is still possible to renew;
- If the domain name is destroyed, it is possible for the End Customer to benefit from an additional period (quarantine period) in order to restore it;
- At the end of these periods, the domain name, reverted to the public domain, will be available again for registration, under the rule of "first come, first served".

8.4 Change of email address

The change of the email address of the Domain Contacts of a domain name is carried out according to the rules enacted by the Registry in charge of the extension concerned and, within the particular conditions and technical limitations of the Registrar.

For ICANN-managed extensions, the rules for changing the email address of the Contact Owner of a Domain Name are available at: <https://www.icann.org/resources/pages/transfer-policy-2016-06-01-en> (II, Inter-Transfer (Change of Registrant)).

In accordance with this ICANN policy, any change of email address of the Contact Owner of a domain name in an ICANN-managed extension requires validation and involves the establishment of specific protection against transfers for a period of sixty (60) days following the change.

The End Customer expressly agrees that Gandi will act on Your behalf as a "Designated Agent" as provided in the above-mentioned ICANN Policy and as such, Gandi:

- approves any change of email address on behalf of the Contact Owner requesting the change; and
- does not activate specific protection against transfers from Your domain name (s) to another registrar during the sixty (60) day period following the change.

8.5 Change of ownership

Unless otherwise agreed by the Supervisory Authorities and Registries, the End Customer may assign its domain name to a third party by following the procedure on the Gandi web interface and paying the corresponding fees.

The change of ownership may require the manual intervention of the Registrar and the production of supporting documents.

The change of ownership does not necessarily include the renewal of the domain name, which must then be the subject of a specific request and regulation.

As part of this procedure, the purchaser will be asked expressly to substitute for the End Customer and to agree to be bound, in its place, by the special conditions applicable to the extension of the domain name concerned. and, if applicable, the Contracts applicable to the ancillary optional services of the domain name.

The change of ownership of the domain name does not terminate, by right, the ancillary optional services attached to it.

It will be up to the End Customer to either terminate them before giving up the domain name, or to ensure that it deletes all possible Content itself as part of any ancillary optional services, to which it would not wish to grant access to the new domain name owner, which will, as a result of the assignment, take over all its rights and obligations.

In any event, the End Customer remains bound by its obligations as domain name holder as long as its contact details appear in the Whois.

For ICANN-managed extensions, the rules for changing the ownership of a domain name under these extensions are available at: <https://www.icann.org/resources/pages/transfer-policy-2016-06-01-en> (II, Inter-Transfer (Change of Registrant)).

The End Customer expressly agrees that Gandi will not activate specific protection against transfers of its domain name(s) to another Registrar during the sixty (60) day period following the change of ownership.
